Floyd Spence (chairman of the committee) presiding. Opening Statement Of Hon. Floyd Spence, A Representative From South Carolina, Chairman, Committee On National Security The Chairman. The meeting will please be in order. This morning the committee continues its series of hearings on the nature of the post-cold-war world and the strategic challenges facing the United States. Today our focus will be on Russia, a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma, as Winston Churchill put it. Although Churchill was speaking of the Soviet Union, his words are still appropriate in describing post-Soviet Russia. On the eve of the Russian elections, we would do well to focus on the security challenges Russia will continue to pose to America - regardless of who wins this weekend. In recent years, the United States has tried to transform Russia from a former enemy into a friend, ally, even strategic partner. We have enjoyed some modest successes, generally when mutual interests were readily served. But lately, the prospects for partnership have dimmed. Russia is violently opposed to NATO expansion, to the point of raising the threat of renewed nuclear tensions. Boris Yeltsin has waged a bloody and bitter war in Chechnya, extending a pattern of Russian suppression, subversion, and intervention from the Caucasus through Central Asia. Russia has, since last November, been in violation of the Treaty on Conventional Forces in Europe, and...
