

Path Into the Sun: Poems from 1985 to 2006 (Paperback)

By Joan Burstyn

iUniverse, United States, 2009. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 211 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Joan Burstyn views the stuff of our daily lives with keen observation rendered in thoughtful expression. These lyrical poems remind us that the life cycle and our emotional reactions to everyday occurrences bring to the surface love, memories, regret and thoughts of life's ending. An inspiring book. -Ferris Olin, Director, Institute for Women and Art, Rutgers University Finally, the public can enjoy Joan Burstyn's poetry as the Woods Hole community has for years! -Margaret McCormick, Director Woods Hole Public Library In Path Into the Sun, award-winning poet Joan Burstyn shares her beautifully intense collection of lyrical free verse. With an engaging style, Burstyn weaves together her internal musings and images from nature in this her third volume of poetry. Such universal emotions and experiences as forgiveness, grief, loneliness, lessons learned, and the value of friendship are highlighted as Burstyn leads others down a path of personal reflection sure to invigorate, and inspire. An excerpt from Path Into the Sun Wide-eyed, bewildered as a wakened child, a wombat looks up at the humans viewing it. We...
